

Bolivians Submit Evidence That Guevara Leads Rebels

By J. Y. Smith

Washington Post Staff Writer

Bolivia claimed yesterday that Ernesto "Che" Guevara, the former right-hand man of Fidel Castro who mysteriously disappeared more than two years ago, has been leading Cuban-inspired guerrillas within its borders.

To back the claim, Bolivian Foreign Minister Walter Guevara Arze showed a score of pictures that he said depicted Guevara in the Bolivian jungles.

The Minister spoke to a meeting of the foreign ministers of the Organization of American States called to consider a charge by Venezuela that Cuba had landed guerrillas and terrorists on its shores.

Since "Che" Guevara disappeared from public view in March, 1965, there have been numerous reports that he was dead or preparing guerrilla uprisings in any one of a half a dozen Latin American countries.

Associated Press

TWO VIEWS—Ernesto Guevara in Uruguay in 1961 and, at right, as identified in Bolivian government photo.

Mindful of these reports, U.S. officials said they were nonetheless impressed by the case made by the Bolivians. Secretary of State Dean Rusk was among those who heard it made.

The case included an analysis of the guerrilla leader's facial structure based on photographs taken of him

See OAS, A4, Col. 1